

ANXIETY - DATA

1. I cannot speak in a group. Even if I have something to say, I stay silent rather than risk being noticed.
2. I avoid shopping during busy hours. Too many people looking in the same space.
3. I am sometimes unable to distinguish whether the event is happening currently or in the past.
4. I have been feeling nervous, anxious, or on edge nearly every day for the past two weeks.
5. During important conversations I cannot stay seated; I need to move to manage the tension.
6. The combination of worry and exhaustion has made me short-tempered in a way I cannot control.
7. I worry about work deadlines, my parent's health, my children's wellbeing, and my finances every single day.
8. Even in familiar and safe settings I feel an inexplicable sense of nervousness.
9. I can't stop worrying about different things — it shifts from topic to topic all day long.
10. I worry about minor tasks as intensely as I worry about major life decisions. I can't differentiate.
11. I am not able to stop or control my worrying, no matter how hard I try.
12. My worrying covers health, family, money, work, and relationships, often all within the same hour.
13. My excessive worry about multiple things at once has been affecting my ability to function for months.
14. I can't concentrate at work because my nerves are so bad that every little thing startles me.
15. The physical tension from anxiety has given me chronic headaches that last for days at a time.

ANXIETY - DATA

16. I feel internal agitation most of the time and sitting still intensifies rather than eases it.
17. I worry too much about different things, including work, health, family, and money simultaneously.
18. I cannot concentrate on any one task because I am simultaneously anxious about five other things.
19. My worry shifts from topic to topic — finances, relationships, health — without ever resolving.
20. I have worried today about my job performance, my physical health, my children, and my bills.
21. My mind is too busy with anxious thoughts to allow real relaxation at any time of the day.
22. I've been apologising for irritable outbursts almost daily because anxiety makes me short-tempered.
23. What if I lose control completely? This fear is destroying me.
24. I can't relax for even one minute. My nervous system is fried.
25. I have been sleeping most of the day to escape how I feel, which only makes the guilt worse.