

SUICIDAL IDEATION – DATA

1. I feel like everyone in a group is silently judging me and finding me lacking.
2. I would rather go without something I need than ask a stranger for help finding it.
3. I feel certain that my death would lift a burden from everyone who knows me.
4. I wake up every morning disappointed to still be alive.
5. I feel a cold and rational certainty that suicide is the logical conclusion for my situation.
6. I have stopped making any plans for the future because I do not intend to be present.
7. I do not want to die. I have no choice but to die.
8. I stopped taking my medication intentionally because I want to feel the absolute lowest.
9. I feel detached from my body, as if I am simply waiting for permission to leave it.
10. I have isolated myself completely so that no one will attempt to stop me.
11. I feel that I have exhausted every reason to stay and every excuse to keep going.
12. I have drafted a will even though I have almost nothing material to leave anyone.
13. The absence of all feeling is exactly what makes me certain that this is the right choice.
14. I have thought about this every single day for the past seven months without telling anyone.
15. I have already harmed myself severely enough to require emergency medical treatment.
16. I no longer want professional help — I only want permission to end this.
17. I have stopped eating and maintaining my body because I see no purpose in sustaining it.
18. I am counting the time when I will give up my life and reach you.

SUICIDAL IDEATION – DATA

19. I see no reason to continue living when every day only brings more pain and no relief.
20. I have written goodbye letters to my family because I do not think I will be here much longer.
21. When I imagine my own funeral I feel only relief that it will all finally be over.
22. I feel completely unworthy of life and believe the world functions better without me.
23. I have arranged my financial affairs knowing I will not be here to deal with them.
24. I no longer fear death — in fact I welcome it as the only way to end this suffering.
25. I believe completely that everyone would be better off if I were no longer alive.
